GUNMEN MURDER ARREST

London, May 16.
The climax of a 17-day manhunt by more than 50,000 British police came today when Scotland Yard announced that the man wanted in connection with the gunman murder in a central London street had been detained.

At the same time, the girl whose photograph was yesterday published all over the country at the request of the Police as being known to be an associate of the wanted man, walked into a police station at Gicle, in Yorkshire, and volunteered a statement.

The police description of the wanted man during the search said that he was required only for questioning—the careful legal phrase used during the hunt a few months ago for the sex maniac George Heath, who was hanged for a double murder—but added that he was a dangerous criminal and believed to be armed.

But when seen by a police constable at Woolwich, south-east of London, this morning, the man was detained by the police without incident and found to be unarmed.

The London murder, which started a countrywide manhunt, heralded short outbreaks of gunmen crimes in Britain. A motercyclist, E. de Antiquis, a husband and a father, tried to stop three men running away from a robbery in central London and was cold-bloodedly shot down.

Later on the same day, police were fired at after another robbery, and the following night, a taxi-driver was shot from behind in the driving seat of his cab in a country road near Birmingham.—Reuter.

SHANGHAI SHARE BROKERS

"GO ON STRIKE"

Business Stops In Protest Against New Regulation Would-Be Seller Almost Mobbed

Shanghai, May 17.
Trading in Chinese security and the Stock Exchange here was halted today. Share brokers protested against the new Government regulation requiring them to put up security in the new United States Dollar Government bonds. Brokers formerly were required to furnish CN$20,000,000 cash and CN$30,000,000 in shares as security. The new regulation provides for turning the deposits into Chinese Government U.S. Dollar bonds plus a 31 per cent margin covering daily transactions.

The Government's move is designed to push the sales of the U.S. Dollar bonds and short-term currency notes issued on April 1, totalling US$400,000,000. Sales so far only have totalled US$18,000,000.

Brokers attended today's session but refused to participate. One broker made a quotation but was almost mobbed by brokers and had to be escorted off the floor under the protection of Stock Exchange officers.

"Eat Up Everything"

Meanwhile three more universities and colleges have joined the "eat up everything" strike, bringing the total to 13 schools with a sum enrollment of 20,000 students in the movement to force Government to increase the living allowance to CN$100,000 each.

The Executive Yuan, in an extraordinary meeting, agreed to raise the allowance from CN$25,000 to CN$48,000 but the students are still holding out for more.

Two more universities in Shanghai—the Fudan and Utopia—joined the strike today, bringing the total to seven and involving more than 10,000 students.

Five universities are striking in Nanking and six in Peiping. In Shanghai, representatives of the Government universities held a meeting today and decided to conduct a health checkup to find out the number of tuberculosis cases among students due to malnutrition.—United Press.

No Discounts

Shanghai, May 17.
Shanghai's white-collar workers will henceforth receive their monthly salaries calculated without any discounts in accordance with the monthly living index which will be re-instituted by the City Government this month, according to Mr. Wu Kai-hsien, Municipal Social Affairs Commissioner.

Commissioner Wu said that wages for productive workers will be calculated on the basis of the current month's living index instead of the previous month's as practised in the past in most local cotton mills. Furthermore, overtime work will be paid, serving as an encouragement and reward to industrious and skillful workers, Commissioner Wu said.—Central News.

LAWYER RUNS AMOK

Washington, May 17.
A negro lawyer went into the Municipal Court building here today, shot a Bar Association official to death and wounded another, then killed a policeman and wounded a guard who were pursuing him.

He himself was shot four times and captured. His injuries are not considered critical. Police said the shooting started over a demand by the lawyer that he get back $125 he had put up as an entrance fee into the district of Columbia Bar Association.—Associated Press.

No Simple Remedy For British Ills

London, May 16.
Mr. Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, told the press today that the "ugly facts" of Britain's economic situation showed there was "no simple remedy." It was Mr. Morrison's first press conference since his recent illness.

Showing a notable lack of his former robustness, Mr. Morrison had difficulty in mounting the conference platform. He said that since his return to office he had found "everything in a state of flux... which is annoying in some ways although it is hopeful, inasmuch as it leaves all the doors open—doors leading to a better world as well as those leading to the slippery slopes of inflation and economic disaster."

Mr. Morrison said he was seen in up-to-date statistics, which demonstrated the "remarkable resilience in British industry," which still had not felt the full effects of the fuel crisis and the record had winter.

"However, we cannot honestly say yet that we are accurately on our way and that the risks of disaster are behind us. Our future still rests with all of us in our own hands... but time, like fuel and dollars and meat, is in very short supply," Mr. Morrison said in answer to questions regarding the outlook for steeling convertibility, scheduled for July this year.

Too Enthusiastic
He then reviewed the fuel industry, which was the core of the entire industrial crisis and concluded: "In our enthusiasm we got involved in more commitments than our fuel resources would support and some of our offensives collapsed. For that reason now we must re-orient our forces to regain the initiative, rebuild resources above danger point, and fully support commitments at home and abroad."

was not and cannot be an end in itself—the second phase must be complete revision of the conditions in which these industries operate."

Mr. Morrison said the steel industry outlook was still "anxious" and had not yet felt the full effects of the fuel crisis which had similarly affected automobile and building material production, both of which were heavy fuel users and "there are not enough economic producers in commission to keep these industries fully supplied without great waste of fuel."

Asked when Government proposed nationalizing gas and the iron and steel industries, Mr. Morrison replied: "I cannot anticipate the King's speech... but they are certainly both on the list."

Regarding the textile industry, he pointed out that, despite improvement, output was still little more than 50 per cent of ten years ago and "until we get lots more people into textiles, we must resign ourselves to clothes rationing indefinitely."—United Press.

Bonfires In London Streets

Taken in Leadenhall Market, London, on May 8th, this picture shows garbage being burned in big bonfires as a result of a strike by a thousand City of London sweepers who went out ten days before in support of the Billingsgate constables. The policemen refused to work in protest at the promotion of one of their number to sergeant. The strike was voluntarily called off the day this picture was taken, the strikers anticipating they were "not prepared to be the cause of any menace to the health of the community."—(Associated Press Photo).

More Fireworks In U.N. Session

Lake Success, May 17.
The United States and Russia clashed today in a sharp tongued flare-up over Yugoslavia's right to deliver a "tirade" against the Greek Government in the United Nations Security Council.

United States deputy delegate Herschel Johnson and Soviet deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko flung the hot words back and forth after the American interrupted a speech by Sava Kosanovic, Yugoslav representative, with the remark, "Do we have to put up with this vote against the Greek government?"

"I have never heard such an astonishing statement made in the Security Council," Kosanovic retorted. "Yugoslavia has the right to defend herself."

Gromyko said, "I ask the United States delegate not to interrupt and let Yugoslavia speak."

Chairman Ignored
Johnson replied, "I do not recognize the right of the Soviet delegate to tell me when and how to speak."

Gromyko retorted, "I suggest the United States delegate is not the arbiter."

By this time Johnson and Gromyko were shouting back and forth without regard to the Council chairman Alfonso Lopez.

Lopez, of Colombia, then told Kosanovic he could resume his statement "although some of it may not be relevant to the question."—Associated Press.

Briton Killed By Mine

Jerusalem, May 16.
A British CID constable was killed and three other passengers of a police car injured today when a mine exploded near Haifa and the vehicle ran out of control, smashed into a house and burned.

A Jewish police inspector and a British constable were slightly injured and the fourth passenger, another British constable, seriously hurt.

An official statement said the mine was exploded prematurely by electrical contact 80 yards from the mine.—United Press.

Total Toll

Jerusalem, May 16.
Since January of this year, 78 persons including 113 British police and 28 British soldiers have died in terrorist outrages in Palestine. An official statement said today.—Reuter.

NO CHANGE IN DOLLAR RATE

Nanking, May 17.
Finance Minister O. K. Yui refuted a pure rumour the report that the Ministry of Finance is planning revision of the United States dollar official rate. The Finance Minister asserted that the false report was the work of speculators and manipulators of the money market.—Central News.

Departure Of Sir Mark Young

A large and representative gathering of the three services, members of Council, officers of the Colonial Administration, and prominent members of the local communities and their ladies gathered at Queen's Pier yesterday afternoon to bid good-bye to His Excellency the Governor, Sir Mark Young, G.C.M.G., and Lady Young and their daughter, Miss E. N. Young, who left for England by the ss. "Strathnaver."

His Excellency inspected a Guard of Honour of the Combined Services before coming on to the pier, which was specially beflagged and carpeted for the occasion, and then with a handshake and a parting word took leave of his many friends, among whom the Chinese community was largely represented.

Among those present were Sir Robert Ho Tung, Sir Shou-sun Chow, the Hon. Mr. D. M. MacDougall, the Hon. Mr. D. F. Landale, the Hon. Mr. R. R. Todd, the Hon. Mr. R. D. Gillett, the Hon. Mr. Leo d'Almeida, the Hon. Mr. C. G. S. Follows, the Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo, the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, the Hon. Dr. S. N. Chau, Mr. Justice E. H. Williams, Mr. E. Wynne-Jones, Mr. D. W. Macintosh, Dr. I. Newton, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rutledge, Mr. W. N. Thomas Tam and Dr. Katie Woo.

NEW DEFENCE PROBLEM DOWN UNDER

Canberra, May 17.
Senior members of the Australian Government believe an entirely new defence situation will confront the Commonwealth when Britain withdraws from India in 1948.

Ministers expect, however, that Field Marshal Lord Montgomery will be charged with a special mission to discuss revised Empire defence planning in the light of India's independence in his talks with the Australian Government and the Defence Chiefs of Staff in Australia in July.

Foremost among changes in Empire strategic plans anticipated by informed Australian authorities is the possible re-disposition of naval bases which will place greater emphasis on the importance of the Australian bases at Darwin and Sydney.

It is conceded that this development may be modified by any special defence arrangements that might be negotiated by Britain with India.

Ceding Bases?

It is thought possible that Britain may arrange for the ceding of these bases in the same way as the Simonstown base at South Africa was placed permanently under British control.

Although Ministers are cautious about future developments, they are apprehensive of the possibilities if India cannot devise a stable government. It is recognized that this could precipitate a situation fraught with menacing possibilities in an area uncomfortably close to Australia.

The prospect of an unsettled India may compel the Australian Government to undertake earlier than had been hoped the problem of devising stronger permanent post-war defences.—Associated Press.

Two O.R.s. Missing In Palestine

Jerusalem, May 17.
The Army announced today that two British soldiers in Palestine have been missing for the past 24 hours.

An emergency military broadcast to 100,000 British troops in Palestine and police radio cars disclosed the disappearance of the two soldiers. The announcement did not suggest they had been kidnapped.

The underground Irgun organization has made kidnapping threats against British troops since the execution of Dov Gruner and three other underground members.

Ship Caught

Meanwhile, the Royal Navy has intercepted a badly overcrowded Jewish refugee ship, "Trade Wind," carrying an unascertained number of illegal immigrants 65 miles off the Palestine coast. The "Trade Wind" is the third vessel of the underground's "summer offensive" against immigration restrictions to be caught.

The 120-ton vessel's voyage is reported to have been organized by Hagannah, the largest Jewish underground organization. The "Trade Wind" is being escorted to Haifa.

The Navy has not put a boarding party on the vessel as it did on other refugee ships intercepted recently.—United Press.

Cane, Gaol For Four Gunmen

Tau Shu, Yeung Fu, Taul Ho Chuen and Kwan Shu, who were yesterday found guilty by a jury on two charges of armed robbery, were each sentenced to ten years' imprisonment with hard labour and 12 strokes of the cane by Mr. Justice T. J. Gould, before whom they were tried.

Tau Shu and Kwan Shu had already pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of arms and ammunition.

The jury were unable to reach a verdict against Chau Kim Hung alias Chau Chak Nam, who was charged together with the above accused. He has been remanded in Police custody.

Wong To, who was only charged with possession of arms and ammunition, was found not guilty and discharged.

Mr. J. Reynolds, assisted by Inspector Fraser, prosecuted on behalf of the Crown.

Mr. H. Shing Lo appeared for Chau Kim Hung alias Chau Chak Nam and Taul Ho Chuen. The other accused were not legally represented.

In a plea for mitigation, Taul Shu said that he had a 71-year-old mother, a wife and five children.

Taul Ho Chuen said that he had a 70-year-old grandmother in the country and two sisters.

The fifth accused, Kwan Shu, who broke into tears while pleading for leniency, said that he had aged parents and younger brothers dependent on him. He asked for the lightest sentence possible and promised never to return to Hong Kong after his release.

Under Orders published in the Gazette yesterday, the Governor-in-Council has prohibited the import or export of gold bullion, gold coin or articles made wholly or partly of gold.

Sequel To Ma-Chan Monday's Criminal Sessions

With the conviction of Ma Shek, odd job coolie, by Mr. Latimer at Kowloon yesterday, "Finis" was written to the gang fight between the Ma and Chan clans at Canton Road on the night of May 4 in the course of which two of the participants were shot in the legs by Det.-Sgt. Cheng Ming.

Ma Shek, one of the wounded men, was charged with possession of a chopper and disordered conduct, and sentenced to a month's hard labour.

DSI W. J. Wall, prosecuting, informed the Court that the case was the last of a series brought in connection with the fight in which choppers, hammer and cargo hooks were freely used by the participants.

Det.-Sgt. Cheng Ming, in evidence, stated that when he arrived on the scene he saw several men, brandishing choppers, approaching him. On their refusal to stop he fired four shots, two of which found their marks. Defendant was one of the men wounded.

Accused, giving evidence on his own behalf, declared that he was on his way to collect some money due him as wages when he saw a large crowd at Canton Road. He stepped on to the pavement where, later, he received a gunshot wound.

In reply to DSI Wall, accused denied that he went to Canton Road to assist his clansmen in the fight against the Chans, being a Yaumati man, he said, he did not know of the existence of a feud between the two clans.

Replying to a further question, accused denied that he was involved in a gang fight during the Japanese occupation when the Ma clique managed to oust the Chans from their employment in the Kowloon Godowns.

On accused being convicted, DSI Wall informed H. W. Shing that information was received by the Police on May 16 that an order for 40 axes, 20 hammers and 50 cargo hooks had been received by a shop in Yaumati from a certain man. These weapons, said DSI Wall, were to be used for fights between the two gangs.

Continuing, the prosecuting officer stated that the fight between the two clans, were actually instigated by members outside the employ of the Godown Co.

Sequel To Theft From RAF Store

On the application of DSI Matches, six unemployed Chinese, charged with store breaking and possession of dangerous goods, were remanded for 48 hours by Mr. Blair-Kerr at Kowloon yesterday for further inquiries.

Fung Chung was charged with breaking into the store-room of the R.A.F. at Kai Tak on May 10 and stealing therefrom nine boxes of gun-cotton primers and one jack, and with possession of the primers in an air-raid shelter at Ngau Tau Kok.

Chan Wah, Chan Kam-cheung alias Lai Wong, Tsang Choi, Tsang Kau, and Chau Cheung were jointly charged with aiding, abetting and assisting Fung in the robbery, and, with him, with possession of the primers.

Guilty Of Loitering

Two partners in crime who were sentenced to two months' hard labour on Feb. 25 made an appearance before Mr. W. H. Latimer at Kowloon yesterday, and were again sentenced to two months' penal servitude.

According to DSI R. MacKenzie, Det.-Sgt. So Kwong was on patrol duty at the Yaumati Typhoon Shelter at 3.30 a.m. on May 16 when he saw an unlicensed sampan with two men on board.

On being challenged, Leung Tinsing was seen by the detective to jump overboard, while Kwok So rowed away "rather quickly". After pulling the first accused out of the water the detective went after the second man and caught up with him.

When the sampan was searched, continued DSI MacKenzie, a pair of pliers and a triangular file was found on board.

In a statement from the dock, first accused denied that he was on the boat, and declared that the two exhibits did not belong to him. The same denials were made by Kwok.

Mr. Latimer found both defendants guilty of the charge of being "suspected persons or reputed thieves, loitering with intent to commit a felony," and not guilty on the count of possession of the pliers and file.

Alleged Gunman Remanded

Lo Ping-yu, 20, alleged to be involved in a shooting at Bondary Street on April 5, appeared before Mr. Blair-Kerr at Kowloon yesterday charged with the possession of a revolver and five rounds of ammunition, and with receiving the arms and ammunition.

On the application of DSI C. Downman, accused was remanded for five days in gaol custody for further inquiries.

It will be recalled that at 9.45 p.m. on April 5, Police Detectives Corporal Sin Tin-hong was on patrol duty in Nathan Road, near Bondary Street when he challenged two Chinese. One of the men, alleged to be the accused, attempted to draw his revolver, whereupon the constable opened fire hitting the man in the neck.

The wounded man was admitted to Kowloon Hospital in a serious condition but was discharged a couple of days ago.

FEMALE "CRAP-SHOOTERS"

A raid conducted by a party of detectives, under DSI Sykes, at 21 Argyle Street, second floor, on May 16 resulted in the arrest of 14 Ying, a 20-year-old widow, and 11 females who were found playing dice on the premises.

On her pleading guilty to the charge of keeping a common gaming house, 14 Ying was fined $100 by Mr. Blair-Kerr at Kowloon yesterday, while six of the gamblers were fined in the sum of $10 each. The five gamblers had their bail of $25 each.

Monday's Criminal Sessions

The May Criminal Sessions will open at the Supreme Court at 10 a.m. tomorrow, when pleas in twelve cases will be taken before Sir Henry Blackall, Chief Justice.

Among the twelve cases listed are, those of John Kenneth Graie and Frank Henry Johnston, who are charged under the Defence Regulations.

The following is a list of the cases to be called:

But never with an "H.B."

THE HONGKONG BREWERY & DISTILLERY, LIMITED

EVERY EFFORT has been made to include POPULAR periodicals of every class in this price list, but as there are more than 30,000 periodicals in Great Britain and the United States, it is manifestly impossible to list them all. We believe, however, this is the MOST COMPLETE AND CORRECT LIST EVER PRESENTED TO THE PUBLIC.

DELIVERY-Conditions have not yet entirely returned to normal. While many publications are back to pre-war schedule, a few magazines require as much as four to eight weeks before the first copy can be mailed. Most professional and technical publishers make the necessary delay to start service on new subscriptions on account of postwar paper and press scarcity.

BACK NUMBERS—Although we request publishers to start subscriptions with issue indicated by the subscriber, most publishers start with the current issue and so back numbers are not guaranteed to be obtainable with each order.

indicate how often it is published.

M-Monthly; W-Weekly; A-Annually;
SM-Semi Monthly (or twice a month);
SA-Semi Annually (or twice a year);
BM-Bi-Monthly, (or every two months);
BW-Bi-Weekly (or every two weeks);
Q-Quarterly (or four times a year);

Nos. the number of copies that comprise the subscription. In the case of newspapers; "6 issues" means every day of the week except Sunday, while "7 issues" or D includes Sunday.

RATES ARE NOT GUARANTEED—Owing to fluctuation in costs, publishers often increase prices without advance notice even though we have the most close business connection with them. Should any price be raised, subscriptions will be entered for the length of time the money paid will cover, unless otherwise requested.

CANCELLATIONS—Reason for cancellation must accompany request. Some publishers make refunds on cancellations, while others do not. When a subscription is cancelled and another magazine is ordered in its place, you must pay for the latter in full. We cannot credit the proceeds of a cancellation toward a new subscription for we never know the amount of the cancellation refund until it is received and this is delayed by the publisher for several months. When refund has been received from the publisher we will refund to you.

SAMPLE COPIES FOR FREE PERUSAL—We do not carry all the magazines in stock to meet the clients' requirement on single-copy sales. However, we carry on hand many sample copies, particularly those of technology and profession for the free perusal of the prospective subscribers.

RATES INCLUDE POSTAGE-All the prices include the cost of the magazines and postage mailed to any part of the world irrespective of whatever territory the subscriber resides. The following subscription rates are for the period of ONE YEAR and in Hong Kong currency or its nearest equivalents.

We agree to meet any offer made by any RESPONSIBLE subscription agency and in addition promise Immediate, Efficient, Courteous Service.

Stalingrad Factories Are Humming Again

Says
O.H. Brandon

Lavrenti Makedon is the proud manager of Russia's greatest tractor factory. "Of course we are going to fulfill our plan for 10,000 tractors this year," he said, straightening his broad shoulders behind the primitive desk in his office. Manager Makedon is 42 and, as he shyly adds, the father of nine children.

"What kind of reparations from German current production would you need?" I asked him, with reference to the Moscow Conference. The short, heavy-set man simply shrugged his shoulders, and his pocket-squared face looked somewhat bewildered.

New Shops

Later he showed us the new machine shops where about 50 per cent of the machine tools came from post-war Germany. They are all specially marked. The remaining 50 per cent, are of American makes. In the heavy fighting for the factory, during which 500 workers were killed, much of the machinery was destroyed. Now it is being replaced by German material.

Tractor production is already up to 35 per cent but the pre-war production was 50 per cent. War and living conditions, Manager Makedon says, have not influenced the working capacity of the workmen. On the contrary 45 per cent, work above their pre-war output. This, he thinks, has lots to do with the schools which increase the work of individuals up to 300 per cent above the norm, even though all norms were pushed up six months ago. Still, even the present norms are well below the average working capacity of the British worker.

In the Red October plant, Manager Alexander Padurovov gave us a more precise explanation of the price calculation. About 42 per cent, he said, of the selling price goes for wages, 35 per cent, for raw materials, and the rest goes for amortisation and for profit. This profit goes to the State, but 5 per cent of any profit exceeding the production target goes to the director of a fund which pays special bonuses either to all the workers or to the factory's cultural and sports institutions.

The manager never actually sees any money except his salary. Raw materials are paid for by the State Bank and the customers pay into the State Bank.

No Secrets

Manager Padurovov has had no reparations equipment from Germany except a few cranes. Now he managed to rebuild his factory which for almost three weeks was a battleground, with the Germans holding one half, the Russians the other, in a struggle, because his furnaces, machinery and imposing steel construction are far more difficult to repair than the tractor plant.

Padurovov, who has been manager since before the war, makes an impression of calm, modest competence. No question rattles him. He enjoyed showing us around and there was nothing secretive about anything. Even photographs were allowed. But he refused to divulge his salary.

Fifteen hundred tons of steel from five furnaces per day is the norm for the workers. If they exceed this they get their special bonus. Smoke curls up out of 22 chimneys of the Red October plant now, and that is what gives hope to the people of Stalingrad.

JUAN'S ATTITUDE

Lisbon, May 17. Don Juan, Pretender to the Spanish throne, does not intend to co-operate with Generalissimo Francisco Franco in establishing a constitutional monarchy in Spain, a spokesman for the exiled prince said here today. "As far as Franco is concerned it will have to be unconditional surrender," the spokesman said. He was commenting on the report in the British House of Commons by Labourite members, who said Don Juan was ready to co-operate with Franco. Associated Press.

NITTI TO TRY

Rome, May 16. Signor Francesco Nitti, 78-year-old liberal leader, was today asked by the President to form a government in succession to Signor Alcide de Gasperi, whose four-month-old coalition cabinet resigned on Monday. On leaving the President's office, Signor Nitti said that he had not given any definite answer to the President's invitation and had reserved his acceptance. —Reuter.

"Normandy To The Baltic," By Field-Marshal Viscount Montgomery

Monty's Reply To The Armchair Critics

Amateur generals have had their say, in some cases with a reaction upon themselves, like a deep gulp of too-hot coffee. Now the professional has told his story, without digression, and rationalises the whole Western Front campaign from Normandy to VE-Day so clearly that only a dolt would contest it.

One might have expected, even forgiven, Field-Marshal Viscount Montgomery exhibiting a little egotism or quiet boasting here and there, but in this respect the book is quite unlike the limelight-loving personality built round him in wartime. Astute Montgomery, knowing he has the book of the age for the British public, has written in one text for officers in military planning, and an explanation of the campaign, liberally mapped, which anyone can understand from Sixth Grade up.

Already, before the book has hit the bookshelves, he is reputed to have made £6000 from it. It will also make some American war-reviewers of well-known "quickies" read their own versions again.

It Explains

It does not rhapsodise or rant. In clear prose, apparently deliberately not very far above "basic English" in vocabulary, Montgomery has gone back to his HQ caravan, sat himself again in his chair, chewed his pencils (he doesn't smoke) and thought his moves out loud to the reader. His thoughts are the plans of the British-Canadian 21st Army Group, and they pattern in the whole Allied scheme on land. Incident is used sparingly, only as illustration of a point. In this the book is absorbing and rather fascinating. It explains—its always explaining—what HQ and particularly Montgomery knew of German plans, German strength and German morale, and how he came to act in accordance with that knowledge.

This insight into minds of opposing generals removes many cobwebs from the thought-process of the armchair critics, and will probably make many of us think back on our own "campaigns" with fond hope friends have forgotten them.

Eisenhower

Only one disagreement with Eisenhower is mentioned. This is treated on the highest plane of fairness. Montgomery early favoured a rapid thrust with everything rolled up into the heart of Germany. Eisenhower preferred the mass front. Montgomery explains reasons for both views, winds up with the statement, "Eisenhower chose the massed front." Then he gets on with the campaign, without post-mortems or criticisms. He attempts no song of self-praise when his ideas for other aspects of the 21st Army campaign are accepted by Eisenhower.

It's just as if he received the okay, hung up his field telephone and continued his planning in accordance with the green light just given.

Where The Germans Failed

Highlights of the campaign, as the generals thought it out, may best be given in Montgomery's answers to the questions asked at various times by the Armchair Critic.

A.C.: Why didn't the Germans throw us back into the sea at Normandy?

Montgomery... Reactions of the German Supreme Command on receiving news of our landings is shown in a telephone conversation at 1655 hours (4.55 pm) of D-Day between von Rundstedt's Chief of Staff and the Chief of Staff, Seventh German Army. Hitler desired the bridgehead annihilated by the evening of June 6. This order, fantastic in retrospect, shows how little was known in Paris or Berlin of the magnitude of the Allied operation. Owing

Caen

A.C.: Why didn't the British get out of Caen?

M.:... Disappointments had to be faced: delay in taking Cherbourg, and the weather... My immediate aim remained to capture Cherbourg and Caen and get both armies into position facing south to prepare for the break-out on the western flank. I wrote in my directive on June 18, "once the enemy's repelling off policy could be snapped he would obviously find it difficult to gather resources to stabilise the position".

The role of the Second (British) Army was to contain enemy strength and wear it down by sustained offensive action. Thereby I was creating the opportunity to launch the break-out by the First United States Army under the best possible conditions.

Then happened a bit the AC didn't know about. Montgomery relates, "On August 6 orders were given for the advance on the Seine. Hitler disregarded the advice of his generals, and himself ordered that panzer divisions be disengaged, formed up at Mortain facing west, and launched into an attack....

to reach the sea at Avranches. A captured order signed by the Commander of Seventh Army reveals, "On the successful execution of this operation the Fuehrer has ordered depends the decision of the war in the west, and with it, perhaps the decision of the war itself...."

The Germans reached Mortain, but soon began to fall back again. Falaise fell to the Canadians on August 16.... The battle of Normandy was fought exactly as planned before the invasion....

"Slow?"

A.C.: Remember the "stalemate"? Why were we so slow?

M.: I had given D plus 90 as the target for the date to be lined up on the Seine, and in fact the first crossing was made on D plus 75.... General Eisenhower took over direct control of the land battle from September 1.

A.C.: Montgomery's into Belgium, Patton's into Germany. Why on earth have they stopped? Why wasn't it won in 1944.

M.: My own view, which I presented to the Supreme Commander, was that one powerful thrust across the Rhine and into the heart of Germany, backed by the whole resources of the Allied armies, would be likely to achieve decisive results.... If we could run straight through to the Rhine and "bounce" our way across.... we should achieve a prodigious advantage.

The alternative course—the broad front policy—implied lining Allied armies along the length of the River Rhine, then developing operations for the capture of both the Ruhr and Frankfurt areas. Subsequently, operations into Germany could be staged either on the northern axis, or through the Saar and Frankfurt, or along both routes, according to the situation at the time. The main point of difference in the two plans was that the broad front policy avoiding the risks of developing long-range operations on a relatively narrow front; it was the opposite of "sticking our necks out."

Broad Front

The Supreme Commander eventually decided on the broad front. General Eisenhower's orders were that Allied armies should line up along the River Rhine, establish bridgeheads wherever feasible, and that operations would not be developed further east until the port of Antwerp was open and functioning.

A.C.: Arnhem was a useless sacrifice.

M.: The battle of Arnhem was 90 per cent, successful. We were left in possession of crossings over four major water obstacles.... The battle of Arnhem had been designed to gain us quick access to a bridgehead beyond the Rhine (or Waal) and Lower Rhine (or Needer Rijn). It had to be undertaken with resources which left very little margin for the insurance of success.... Full success at Arnhem was denied because weather prevented build-up of airborne forces in the battle area, and the enemy managed to effect a surprisingly rapid concentration of forces to oppose us....

German Reinforcement

A.C.: It's all up now. The Huns are through at Ardennes and say they'll be in Paris by Christmas?

M.: American armies in particular were hampered in their operations by lack of resources, and the solution of the difficulties lay in opening the port of Antwerp.... preparations were in fact in hand when events again caused delay; the German counter-attack in the Ardennes caused us to react strongly....

Late in August, the enemy's fleeing armies were rated at 28 divisions; by mid-December the Germans had not only managed to reform the front and limit invasion to minor areas of Germany, but to increase his field force to some 70 divisions. It was estimated this would be increased to 90 divisions by March 1.

Such was the German military situation when for the second time in the campaign a reserve was to be pledged in a major gamble. Hitler himself ordered that his western armies were to be formed up for a last desperate attack, which was to surprise the Allies, cross the Meuse, and drive to Antwerp....

Desperate Venture

The enemy had been prevented from crossing the Meuse in the nick of time.... The enemy had hoped to hit the Western Allies so hard that our plans would have been seriously retarded, and the German strike-ing force could have been switched to the over-pressed eastern front....

Another reason for playing for time was to develop dispersed, and underground, factories.... Hitler may well have hoped to secure some success to brighten the Christmas of the depressed German people....

Montgomery comments: "With such tremendous issues at stake Hitler should never have gambled his striking force in a desperate venture. It was the second major German mistake in the campaign. It is estimated the enemy lost 120,000 men in the battle, together with 600 tanks and assault guns."

He treats the rest of the campaign much as a matter of course, the outcome of which wasn't in doubt but was only accomplished with hard fighting.

Published by Hutchinson, it is an essential reference work for the Armchair Critic of the next war, if any.

Lullaby creams

Bring you loveliness while you sleep...

To Helena Rubinstein dry skin is the most serious beauty problem. More than seven out of ten women have it. A dry skin ages quickly, lines easily, looks tired. Even if you are twenty and have only a tendency to dryness you will need a gentle lubricant. You may be fifty or sixty and want a cream that is rich. Helena Rubinstein urges you to use these special lubricating creams at night. Smooth them in, in rhythmic, upward strokes. Lullaby for a sleeping beauty!

FUND

Nothing could have been more apt or in keeping than that Sir Mark Young's farewell broadcast to the Colony should have taken the form of an earnest and moving appeal for generous public support of Hong Kong's War Memorial Fund. For all that passed into history in the last twelve months of Sir Mark's career as Governor of Hong Kong, the strenuous final months of 1941 and the grim seventeen days of December, terminating on Christmas Day, grim but memorable in the sense of the Governor's inspiring leadership in the moments of greatest trial and stress, will still be associated with his name when subsequent events have been forgotten. If ever it were true that the hour reveals the man, the Battle of Hong Kong showed Sir Mark Young in his finest hour, and it was perhaps inevitable that at the moment of handing over office for the last time as the Governor of the Colony his mind should have gone back to those days of crisis, and that his thoughts should have concentrated themselves upon those who fought and died in the defence of Hong Kong and of a proud ideal. The very fulfilment of their gallant effort, as the event tragically proved, today merely emphasises the debt of honour owed by this community to the dependants of those who gave their lives and to those who were incapacitated. Liberty in response to this appeal should therefore require no urging. No memorial which proceeded with this debt unsatisfied could be acceptable. No cause could be more worthy, this meeting of something far more than a moral obligation, this assumption of responsibility for those who have sorrowed and suffered that Hong Kong might rise again. The immediate objective of the appeal soon formally to be launched is apparently to be $250,000 to which will be added a further $250,000 as the Government's dollar-for-dollar contribution. It is, however, to be hoped that the official provision will speedily be revealed as substantially insufficient. The aim must go beyond the creation of a fund that may exhaust itself as the calls upon it diminish.

The urge towards a more permanent and tangible memorial, in the form of an addition to the amenities of the people and offering wide scope in social amelioration, remains strong, and this can only be accomplished if the fund created is as generous in size as this conception, enabling the primary purpose to be met in the fullest measure without draining the Fund's resources. That this is not beyond the capacity or the spirit of this community has been amply demonstrated by the generosity of the response to the British Flood Relief Fund. In the War Memorial Fund we have a new call which must awaken even stronger sympathies, as nearer to our hearts as well as our hearts.

PALESTINE &amp; U.N.O.

By Scrutator

The Assembly Committee's report on the Palestine problem should come before the Assembly's ordinary meeting next September, and UNO's future credit will depend not a little on what is then decided.

The problem goes to the United Nations on a reference from Great Britain herself, the Mandatory Power. The Balfour Letter, giving official British support to "the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish People" was dated November 2, 1917. The Mandate for Palestine conferred on Great Britain after the first world war was finally ratified by the League of Nations on July 24, 1922. These are now fairly remote dates, and Great Britain cannot be charged with hastily throwing in her hand. She has had something like a quarter of a century in which to experience the impossibility of pleasing either the Jew or the Arab side without equally displeasing the other. If Shakespeare was right in saying that man's ingratitude is unkindler than the winter wind, then she has had ample time to experience that also.

Forgotten!

It was Britain, and Britain alone, who liberated the Arabs from the Turks; it was Britain and Britain alone, who opened for the Jews the doors of the National Home. Both sides have since forgotten what she did for them, in their pique at what she has not been able to do. Nor has time brought any assuagement. The longer it runs, the sharper grows the cleavage between Arabs and Jews, and the heavier the consequent burden for the Mandatory Power.

Was the programme of the Balfour Letter ever practicable? Some disposition to hedge may be seen in the text of the document. A "National Home" did not mean a Jewish State or a Jewish minority settlement? The words left it open either to pursue the first, if the going proved good, or to claim the second as fulfilment, if it did not. But Zionist opinion took it at the time in the first sense. The Palestine State was not to exclude non-Jews from its franchise—the proviso in the Balfour Letter meant that. But it was to be a State in which Jewish patriotism the world over could find its focus.

The present writer has always held the view that at the outset this was a practicable aim. Some special regime would have been necessary for Jerusalem—a Holy City to Christians, Moslems and Jews alike—and possibly also for Bethlehem and Nazareth. Some special treaty facilities for naval, air and perhaps military bases might reasonably have been asked by Great Britain, and these a Jewish Palestine would have had strong interest in granting. The Palestinian Arabs were at that time very few, very poor, very backward, and they might well have acquiesced in view of the immense economic gains which they would reap from the Jewish settlement. As for the Arabs outside Palestine, it could have been put to them frankly that, having regard to the boon conferred on them by their liberation—from Turkey, it was not much to ask that they should concede this tiny fraction of their vast territorial heritage, provided that their religious rights in its holy places were effectively safeguarded.

Might-Have-Been

But those are might-have-beens. The nettle was never grasped. It will help little today to inquire why it was not. Time has brought changes which have altered all the proportions of the problem. The Arab population in Palestine itself has grown enormously—in numbers, in capacity, in national consciousness. The Arab countries all round it have become nations, and they have developed between them a strong Pan-Arab sentiment, expressed today by the Arab League. They are all actively united to resist a Jewish Palestine, which nobody now could impose without making the entire Arab world his enemies for ever.

To expect Great Britain to ignore such changes is absurd. She has always been the Arabs' friend and well-wisher; between her and them good feeling is mutual. Why should she go out of her way to convert it into antagonism? Her Middle East policy has been based on it, and is this the time to throw that policy away? On the other hand she has also consistently been the friend of the Jews, who in Great Britain have been treated more liberally and with less discrimination than in any other great country—a fact fully recognised by British Jewry, though most inadequately either by European Jewry before the wars or by American Jewry now. She was the author of the Jewish National Home. She can hardly go back on that. But on what terms can she go forward?

Balancing Claims

Placed in this dilemma between Jew and Arab, the Mandatory Power has for nearly twenty years tried as fairly as she could to balance their claims. She refused to hand over Palestine to an Arab majority, which would have used its power to crush out the Jews. On the other hand she refused to allow Jewish immigration on a scale which would have made the Jews a majority and enabled them to crush out the Arabs. She clung to the hope that time would heal the differences. But in fact it has only exacerbated them.

A special contributory to the exacerbation after 1933 was Hitlerism. Banned and persecuted in a growing number of European countries, the Jews fled in increasing numbers to the National Home. Immigration rose to unprecedented heights. This caused the Arab revolt under the Mufti of Jerusalem, and eventually necessitated the White Paper of 1939 restricting immigration. The White Paper deeply antagonised the Zionists, yet with Hitler's war in prospect something of the kind was indispensable.

The terrorist campaign compels us to keep 100,000 troops in Palestine, yet its actual successes have been small. Some figures given by Lord Hall last week showed that between August, 1945, and April 10 last only 98 military and police had been killed, while 32 terrorists had been. Some 168 Jews had been convicted of terrorist offences; but only 28 had been sentenced to death, and of them no fewer than 22 had their sentences commuted. The last figure perhaps shows better than any why terrorism continues.

When it comes to solutions, no Solomon can escape two alternatives—either partition, with self-government for each race, or a united Palestine, with both races governed in perpetuity by a Mandatory Power. Partition is for geographical reasons peculiarly hard, as the map propounded by the 1937 Royal Commission sufficiently showed. But to find a perpetual Mandatory for the thankless task may prove harder still. Partition seems the likeliest ending.

We Don't Owe Them
A Penny

By Candidus

There are some debts that cannot be paid with money. One of them, I should have thought, was this country's service to civilisation in 1940 when we (splendidly reinforced by the Dominions) fought alone—absolutely alone, always alone—against the seemingly irresistible Axis Powers.

If I belonged to a country which had benefited by that performance I should be ashamed if my country demanded from Great Britain the liquidation of the debts incurred in the great cause. But most of the creditor countries, from all the signs, feel no such compunction. Like super-Shylocks they are asking, not for a pound of flesh, but for a ton of it. And they have let it be explicitly understood that we must pay to the uttermost farthing.

We must, in other words, beggar ourselves in order to fill the coffers of those who, but for us, would be living in a state of slavery, instead of opulent freedom.

They owe their freedom to us, and now they are resolved to force us to pay for keeping them free. The bill has been presented to us, and it begins with the international equivalent of "Dea, sir, unless..."

If I were in the seats of the mighty I should not challenge the bills that are being presented to us for payment. But I should render another account for our services to mankind.

I should say, for example, to India: "We owe you over £1,000,000,000. We admit it, and we will pay. We will pay you that sum when you pay us the $5,000,000,000 which is our ultra-moderate charge for having saved you from eternal slavery under the Japanese. But we are not avaricious: we are prepared to wipe off your debt if you are prepared to wipe off ours. We are conceding you the best of the bargain."

If a man saved my house (with my family inside it) from being burned to the ground, I

"Edgar! You know very well that when Mr. Felton remarked 'Oh, brother!' he wasn't calling you!"

should deem it to be pretty foul ingratitude if I sent him in a bill for a fire-hose that he had used for the purpose.

But that is exactly what many of our creditors are doing to us, and it never seems to strike them that there is anything exceptional in their attitude, and it never seems to strike them that we might refuse to accept one dirty end of the stick now, after having accepted the other dirty end in 1940.

The irony of the situation becomes more and more exasperating the closer it is scrutinised. The Dominions, to their eternal honour, backed us up from the very beginning of the war, with every form of help. Since the war ended they have gone on helping us, with money and food. Whereas the others—some of whom spent the war seated comfortably on the fence—would squeeze the last penny out of us if they could.

The crowning irony of all is that we now, in this year of grace, actually find ourselves in debt to one of our recent enemies. What is more, we are paying the debt, as if we were so colossal rich that fifty millions here and there did not matter a snap of the fingers.

There is only one means by which we can deliver the ton of flesh demanded, and that is by sending goods to our creditors. Apparently they perceive nothing unconscionable in that transaction, although it would entail a terrifying reduction in our already meagre standard of living.

Our children are inadequately fed and clothed, as, indeed, we all are. We are taxed up to the gullet. Our existences are monotonous, penurious and drab. If we set ourselves to repaying, by goods, the $3,500,000,000 sterling balances that are held against us by various countries, then it will be proper to describe this epoch in our history not as the "hungry forties," but as the "starving and starving forties."

The blunt truth is that we cannot pay, and if we could, I fail to see why we should. We are not in the world's debt. The world is in ours. We banked—Reuter.

rupted ourselves in order that civilisation and all that it connotes should remain solvent. Every nation with a sense of decency recognises that fact. America recognises it. It is unnecessary to add that the Dominions recognise it. We are grateful to them for the recognition and for the generosity of their conduct towards us.

We are legitimately entitled to expect that those who did much less—when they did anything at all—than the Dominions and the U.S.A. should not lag too far behind in a similar recognition. If they do, we cannot persuade them into a sense of decency that ought spontaneously to animate them. We must leave them to stew in their own juice.

But we should certainly not permit them to stew us in ours.

War Out Of
The Question

Paris, May 16.
M. Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister, told a press conference here to-day that war was "out of the question." The failure of the Moscow Conference was not irreparable, but "time is becoming more and more precious," he added.

"The grave divergencies of opinion among the Big Four on the essential problems of peace should be bridged at all costs to avoid drifting towards a series of separate treaties."

"I entreat you not to let yourselves engage in facile talks of war. War is out of the question." Summing up the Moscow Conference, M. Bidault stated that it had at least one positive result, which was clearly to define the position of each of the Big Four with regard to the German problem, which he described as the "key to European peace."

The French position, he said, was that it was becoming increasingly difficult for France to act as mediator between her allies and that the chances of effecting a conciliation between them diminished as coal was further reduced.—Reuter.

Britain Still Powerful

"Historic Part To Play"—Mr. Bevin

British Policy In For East

London, May 16. Mr. Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary, winding up the two-day debate on foreign affairs in the House of Commons today declared that he had seen many eleven hour and fifty-ninth minute settlements and he hoped that there would still be a settlement of differences between the Big Four.

"But if I have to come to you eventually and say that it cannot be done, then in the light of that the Government will have to review the whole of their policy," he declared.

The Minister declared that the Government did not accept the view that Britain has ceased to play the role of a great power. "We still have our historic part to play," he said.

Mr. Bevin dealt mainly with the Middle and Far East, though in a brief reference to the Saar he said that the Government always supported the French claim to the "old Saar" and hoped they would not insist on claiming any permanent enlargement.

Here are other points in his speech: Egypt—"In all negotiations with Egypt there have been and will be no attempt to appease the Egyptian Government at the expense of the Sudanese people. I offered a just settlement and never attempted to buy it. I care not whether they take this to the Security Council or anywhere else. We can go no further."

Middle East—"The Government must maintain continuing interest in the area if only because our economic and financial interests in the Middle East are of vast importance to us and to other countries as well. If these interests were lost, the effect on the life of this country would be a considerable reduction in the standard of living."

Japan Policy Criticised—Indonesia—Prompt British action in Indonesia had saved millions of lives and he, Mr. Bevin, had taken any possible step open to him to encourage a settlement between the Dutch and Indonesians.

Japan—"I hope it may be possible to conclude an early peace treaty with Japan. The first step is to reach an Allied agreement on the basis of the treaty."

The debate took place on a motion for adjournment, which means there was no vote.

Mr. Rees Williams, Labour, criticising Allied policy regarding trade with Japan, said that the Americans had acted to some extent as receivers of stolen goods. In Japan there were large quantities of goods—tin, rubber, lead and the like—taken from British possessions. They were not the property of their Governments, but of private individuals and were taken to Japan by the Japanese. Those goods had never been handed back, no compensation had been made and it was known that they were taken to America. There was no authority for that in international law or natural justice.

Soviet Manoeuvres—Mr. Harold Macmillan, Minister-Resident at Allied Headquarters, Mediterranean, during the war and chief Opposition speaker today, expressed alarm at certain aspects of the European scene, which seemed to show deterioration rather than improvement, he said. One could not be too thankful that the United States had abandoned isolation and recognised that the safety and prosperity of the new world was inextricably bound up with the restoration and reconstruction of the old.

Speaking of Greece, Mr. Macmillan said that he felt the Foreign Secretary's conduct of affairs there since he took up office had sometimes been obscure and hesitating.

He said that unless genuine accommodation could be found between the Communist and Democratic world, who could say there would not be a third world war.

"In all vital matters at stake time is not on our side. On the contrary, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the Soviet Government is persistently following a policy of procrastination. Does Russia want to see Germany emerge as a nation? Does Russia mean to secure by a fait accompli the rich agricultural land across the German frontier?"

Failure to agree upon the Austrian treaty was very alarming.

SOVIET LEGATION BOMBED

Helsinki, May 16. A bomb was hurled through the window of the Soviet Legation here today, causing slight damage.

The Russian authorities here gave the Finnish police three days in which to arrest the person responsible, and the Chief of the State Police later called on the Soviet reparations authorities to report on his investigations.—Reuter.

Frank exchanges of views without the glare that has gone on hitherto."

Commenting on the criticism that the Government did not take sufficient interest in the Far East, the Foreign Secretary pointed to the Halsey mission in Japan, British representatives all over China and a Special Commissioner's organisation in Southeast Asia. Without Lord Killearn's organisation whole regions might have been affected by starvation.

China—Because famine did not happen, no one noticed it. He invited Members of the House to study the work done by British administrators from Singapore, which had saved a great catastrophe. It was a good tribute to British administration.

Speaking of China Mr. Bevin said that the Government had made approaches to the Chinese Government for a trade treaty at the same time as the United States Government, but the Chinese postponed negotiations with Britain until they had settled with the United States. It was hoped that the negotiations would soon be completed.

"Under the 1943 treaty acceptance of responsibility in connection with former international settlements was undertaken by the Chinese Government. A liquidation committee has been established, whose duty it is to determine these liabilities. Some progress has been made, but there has been a lot of delay."

"I hope matters will be speeded up, and I undertake to the House that I will follow the matter up personally in a vigorous manner."

Meanwhile, former employees are receiving from the British Government up to £40 a month per person, which we shall call upon the Chinese Government to settle in the final adjustment."

Japanese Textiles—Mr. Bevin endorsed tributes made during the debate to General Douglas MacArthur. He said that everything might not be as Britain wanted it in Japan, but it was wrong to say that she did not make any views known. This was done both in Washington and Tokyo. Many of the questions raised in the debate would in any case be dealt with in the final settlement in which Britain would have full opportunity to make her view known and submit her proposals.

He hoped that it might be possible to conclude an early peace treaty with Japan. The first step was already laid—agreement on the basis for the treaty. "The Government's efforts will be directed towards that end and we shall, of course, keep in close touch with the Commonwealth Governments in this matter."

Regarding complaints about labour conditions in the Japanese textile industry, Mr. Bevin said that the recent enactment enforcing wage standards applied to the textile industry. It also stipulated that children under 15 would be withheld from industry. This, he said, was a very important law so far as Japan was concerned.

A Labour Attaché would be sent to Tokyo to keep the Government advised of the steps taken. "But I would say this," continued Mr. Bevin, "You cannot expect to save the industries of Lancashire and Yorkshire by imposing restrictions on other countries. Lancashire and Yorkshire must respond to the Government's efforts to help them, or they will lose anyway."

Assurances By Poland—On Korea, the Foreign Secretary said that it had been agreed to resume four-power trusteeship in Korea on May 20.

Panic In Lahore

New Delhi, May 16. Panic spread in the Punjab's walled capital of Lahore today as communal fighting, now in its third day, grew fiercer hourly. Smoke from a burning temple and blazing bullion and silk markets swirled up to the sky in a dense column, visible for many miles.

Houses, shops and a clothing emporium were also reported to have been set on fire in 12 different parts of the city and this afternoon rioting had extended to new areas.

Five have been stabbed to death and at least seven others injured, and reports spoke of "pitched battles" and "communal madness."

While the authorities reinforced police pickets at strategic points and drafted troops for round the city patrols, the Punjab Governor, Sir Evan Jenkins, was reported to have told a deputation of non-Muslim League leaders that strong measures would be adopted to end the disturbances.

A second bomb explosion within three days was reported from Poona, injuring three pedestrians.

Rioting broke out in east Calcutta and the police opened fire on rioters found looting in the slum area to-day. One was killed by police fire.

A 32-hour curfew has been imposed on the disturbed areas of the Bellaghatta district of the city, where shooting, bomb throwing and arson occurred.

The casualties in the day's incidents were one killed and ten injured. One hundred and sixty-six persons were arrested.

In central Calcutta a stoning battle between Hindus and Muslims broke out at a street crossing after a Hindu had been knocked down by a Muslim lorry driver.—Reuter.

Describing the atmosphere at the conference as "tense," Lavettin said, "the basis factor of uncertainty is the fear of an economic crisis and especially a crisis in the United States."

"The shadow of a coming crisis already lies across international and political relations. American goods are now at their most expensive, and the American monopolies chief attention is devoted to international markets. But what will happen in the event of a crisis? Will not American cut-price goods flood the world markets?"—Reuter.

WAVELL'S NEW TITLE

London, May 16. Field Marshal Lord Wavell has taken the title of "Viscount Kereke of Eritrea and of Winchester in the county of Southampton and Earl Wavell," it was announced to-day.—Reuter.

to establish a provisional Government.

Of Poland the Foreign Secretary said that when he was in Warsaw it was suggested that the British should take 50,000 more Germans into the British Zone from Poland. "We cannot take any more under any circumstances. We have nearly filled our quota under the existing Control Council agreement and any further intake must be in the light of the report to be made by the Control Council on the general question of population transfers affecting Germany. I must emphasise that it is extremely difficult for us to agree to take any more."

On the ratification of the Anglo-Polish financial agreement Mr. Bevin said: "We had a situation that we had talked about, cultural relations and all factors, which are essential for putting our relationships on a proper footing. I did not wish to prolong the situation, which was damaging to the Polish people. I have taken the step on the assurance given me by the Prime Minister of Poland, which I hope will be justified."

THE MASTER SPEAKS: EXCLUSIVE

BRADMAN'S ADVICE TO OUR TEST SELECTORS

By DON BRADMAN

Continuing the series which is to appear exclusively in the "Sunday Herald" Don Bradman today discusses England's problems and chances for forthcoming Tests.

During the recent visit of the M.C.C. team to Australia I had many discussions with players, ex-players, and enthusiasts regarding the future of English cricket.

The consensus of opinion among Englishmen was that cricket in the Mother Country faces an extremely difficult time, and concern was expressed about the loss of young players to the game because of compulsory military service.

Whether this will prove to be a grave handicap I do not feel competent to say, but it was suggested to me by many people that there is a dearth of promising young material in England from which future Test players will develop.

Don't Despair

But I don't think England need be pessimistic. If she reflects upon what happened in 1921, and then remembers the trouncing she gave Australia in 1928, she will realise how much can be done in a few short years.

The future of cricket needs to be carefully watched in many directions, and what happens in the English summer of 1947, when the South Africans are the visitors, will be followed with great interest in other countries.

On England's showing will be revealed further light on her position in the cricket world today, and we shall see more clearly just how great is the need for new blood.

If the English selectors are wise they will take six or seven men who may be regarded as certainties for some time ahead, play them in all Tests against South Africa, and deliberately set out to find the best men for the other positions, having in mind the building of a side to play Australia in 1948.

Attention should be given to fielding. Test players need to be more than just batsmen and bowlers. Jardine's 1932-33 team did not drop a catch in the first four Tests. That sort of fielding wins matches.

It will be interesting to see what sort of wickets are prepared for these England-South Africa Tests, and I hope "dropped" pitches will be replaced by natural, not over-prepared wickets.

It seems clear to me, in an endeavour to look ahead so far as English cricket is concerned, that I must look at the personnel of the last touring team and endeavour to take the best of these men as a nucleus for later Tests, and by so doing find the gaps which must be filled in order to bring the eleven up to the desired strength.

Masterly Hutton

First of all, opening batsmen. England is extremely fortunate to possess Len Hutton, who has many years of first-class cricket ahead of him.

This great player possesses a remarkable temperament which somehow or other seems to be a special product of Yorkshire. Once or twice in Australia he momentarily deserted him, but Hutton will have benefited by his recent experiences, and may also find, as the years pass, that the slower English wickets are more to his liking.

His masterly handling of medium-pace swing bowling is evidence that he has a mortgage on the number one position.

Whether his partner will be Washbrook or not, only time can tell. Cyril's performances in Australia were a mixture, but a particularly good opener will need to be found before he can displace Washbrook. The ideal man, of course, would be a left-hander, but then left-handers cannot be manufactured at will.

We must not overlook Washbrook's beautiful fielding in the covers, where he is the world's number one today. The way he ran—Johnson out in the Melbourne Test was as good as anything I've ever seen.

For the number three and four batting positions, there are Edrich and Compton.

In the earlier matches of the Australian tour, Edrich was the most difficult English batsman to dismiss and showed form better than anything previously revealed to us. That his batting subsequently fell away slightly was, in my opinion, due partially to the amount of bowling he was called upon to do.

The Next Captain

On the other hand, it must have been noted how Compton improved as the tour progressed, until towards the close he was preeminent.

The departure of Hammond from the scene will be regretted as much by Australians as by Englishmen. I confess that I cannot see a player on the horizon who at the moment shows signs of adequately filling Hammond's position.

It has been accepted rather as a matter of course that Norman Yardley will take over, and I am sure he would prove an excellent captain in every respect. His batting in Australia was sound, and often helped to turn the tide, while his bowling, too, was more than useful. But I seriously doubt whether much reliance should be placed upon his bowling for the future, as he is not of the penetrative type.

Ikin's Chance

It has been suggested that Edrich will become an amateur next summer and that he will be a candidate for the captaincy, but of this I have no knowledge.

So we have Hutton, Washbrook, Edrich, Compton and Yardley, but it is still necessary for another batsman or all-rounder to be included.

Jack Ikin may be the man, for he has an excellent temperament, but this is a position in the team where some competition will exist.

In view of his age, Fishlock may find difficulty in gaining further recognition, though, personally, I think Fishlock possesses ability far above that revealed in his performances. Joe Hardstaff was unlucky to develop knee trouble on the last tour and it remains to be seen whether this will interfere with his stroke making.

For the wicket-keeping position Godfrey Evans can scarcely have a rival on the form shown by him towards the conclusion of the Australian visit. England possesses a really class keeper in this boy, quite up to old standards and, moreover, he is destined to surprise some of those who thought his batting was of the number eleven variety.

Bowling Problem

It is from the bowling angle that England may need to make experiments. Bill Voce cannot go on for ever, and Langridge has reached the age when Test cricket becomes a pretty severe hurdle.

I have previously expressed a very high opinion of Alec Bedser as a medium-pace bowler. England needs to look no further for the man to open one end, but she must try and see that Bedser is not used as an embryo fast bowler.

To bowl him with the wind would, I think, nullify his chances, and for that reason the desirability of finding a really fast bowler to open with him is paramount. Pollard is very much the same type of bowler as Bedser, and for that reason he, too, is likely to be more effective when bowling into the wind.

In Doug Wright, England possesses a great slow bowler, and he should be capable of holding his position for some years to come.

The other serious discrepancy in the desirable moulding of a Test team is the vacancy caused by the untimely death of Hedley Verity. Having had no experience of England's younger left-handers since 1938, I have no knowledge of the young players who may be candidates, but here, certainly, is an opportunity for someone to fill a key position.

Three Needs

Allowing for these brief observations, I would summarise them by saying that a fast bowler, a slow left hander and one or two batsmen need to be sought in order to bring the English eleven up to the ideal combination.

There is one thing which I think players of all countries should try to do and that is, provide bright and entertaining cricket so that public interest will be fostered and the right spirit engendered in the young players.

Australians have a feeling that England's professional players are often negative in their methods. This tendency, I am pleased to say, does not exist amongst those who at present seem destined to form the nucleus of future English teams. I mention the matter so that the youngsters of today may be encouraged in their stroke-making.

JOHN BULL REVIVES AS SPRING APPEARS

The Thermometer Is Rising Steadily And
The Heart Of The Country Is Beating Again

In the fields, tufts of grass are becoming verdant islands amid the grey, melting snow.

In country hedges, the first green shoots of spring defiantly bare their heads to the half-hearted sunshine.

And—more mundane sign of recovery—in back gardens washing again gains on the line.

Elsewhere, the effects of the thaw are less noticeable, and the cold spell still has a clasp on London's night life.

In swaggy spots where, six weeks ago, one had to be an Indian prince or at least a duke to rate a welcoming smile from the head waiter, flocks of flunkies now hurry around offering a choice of tables.

Dance Bands Faded Away

But if the number of diners is dropping, the prices aren't, and a dinner bill for two at the Savoy, Claridge's, the Dorchester, or Grosvenor House is still big enough to send unsuspecting out-of-towners searching for an over-draft.

Social life after midnight has practically stopped, and "bottle party" clubs, whose cloakrooms every night before the cold spell used to house enough milk coats to make a sizeable contribution toward repayment of the American loan, now report that the wolf is barking loudly at the door.

Indeed, the wolf barked so loudly this week that some clubs surreptitiously shed the

FUEL OFFICE FOLLOWS FORM

Red tape story of the week concerns a citizen who visited his local fuel office because he wanted to change his coal.

He was given a form which he filled up.

Before leaving the office he asked the clerks "I suppose there will be no difficulty about this?"

The clerk replied: "Oh, yes. You aren't allowed to change your coal, merchant, but it takes about a week for the refusal to come through."

famous and expensive dance bands whose soothing saxophones a few weeks ago kept hundreds of cash customers summoning the wine waiter for gin at £3 a bottle. One reason why the West End, after dusk, looks like Goldsmith's Deserted Village may be that news of the thaw hasn't yet reached the south of France, and Switzerland, whither, it appears, many of the city's night-lifers hurriedly repaired after the first fall of snow.

Another is that pessimistic citizens, remembering earlier false starts, still regard the present rise in temperature as a warty attempt on the part of the meteorological experts to regain public confidence.

Brighter Side Of Atom Energy

Those citizens who sought entertainment last week around that architectural antiquity which in olden days used to house a coal fire, heard the BBC, with Professor Marcus Oliphant and other eminent physicists, reduce atomic energy to basic English.

The Government apparently had the idea that after Hiroshima, the British public took a jaundiced view of the atomic future, and last week's talks were designed to convince them that atomic energy could be used for other purposes than that of annihilating civilisation.

In London, the Philatelic Society lobbied members of Parliament in an effort to convince them of the advantages of issuing pictorial postage stamps.

Why not, urged the philatelists, have stamps showing British beauty spots such as Loch Lomond, or others illustrating the country's engineering supremacy in such things as liners or jet aircraft? A practical argument which impressed members of Parliament is that pictorial stamps would not cost the country £500,000 a year in foreign currency.

East End Cabbage, Mayfair Caviare

London East End housewives want Strachey to tell them how housewives who have £4 a week with which to pay the rent and clothe and feed a family can be expected to afford carrots at 2/- a lb., cabbage at 8d a lb., and cauliflowers at 2/- each.

Other and less austere food news comes from Mayfair, where a shop selling caviare, at 10 guineas a lb. reports that the demand is far outstripping the supply.

For those epicures who can't get caviare, there's plenty of pink-fleshed grass at 35/- a tin, marron glace at 8/6 a lb., and almond oil at 25/- a bottle.

It is unlikely that residents of Mayfair will join the East End housewives in their petition for cheaper carrots, cabbage, and cauliflowers.

Fearless Australian

Six years ago today the Germans entered Athens, and the Acropolis. It was one of the darkest moments of the war. We had been driven out of Greece.
The Germans and Italians had entered Egypt. The German propaganda machine was doing its best to make bad blood between us and the Australians. We were still alone in the war. Even in Britain deferred hopes had made sick hearts.

That same night Mr. Churchill delivered his most difficult and,
in my opinion, his best broadcast of the war. He made no attempt to conceal the gravity of the situation; in his own inimitable manner he put narrow into our hearts, and confidence into our hearts. He ended his broadcast by quoting the last two verses of
Cicero's "Say not the struggle naught availeth."

Those who saw him at the microphone say that there were tears in his eyes as he gave the last two lines:

"In front the sun climbs slow,
how slowly,
But westward look, the land is bright."

Hitler's Fury

If he inspired us with faith, resisting Hitler to fury. Three days later the Fuehrer, punch-mad with victory, made his wildest and most bombastic speech. He covered Mr. Churchill with the foulest slime of personal abuse. He boasted that the National-Socialist State would last a thousand years.

Today Hitler has gone to his hysterical end, and Mr. Churchill, whom Field-Marshal Smuts once described to me as "incomparably the greatest of the three great war leaders," is being freely criticised by a large section of his own countrymen. There must be many Englishmen who, like myself, say today when they examine their inner conscience that but for the Churchill of 1940 and 1941 we should not be here either to praise or to blame.

Such Should Govern

No one who has read this feature for the last year will suspect me of any bias towards the Colonial Office, the weakest and most neglected of our Government departments. All the more gladly, therefore, do I give praise where it is due.

Over here on leave is perhaps the most remarkable person in our Colonial service. This is Lady Huggins, the wife of our Governor of Jamaica. The daughter of a well-known Malayan Civil Servant, she spent a considerable part of her life in Malaya, and speaks Malay with forcible fluency.

Jamaica, one of the most difficult posts in our colonial service, she is easily the most popular British subject in the island.
The reason is simple. She has solved a problem which has defeated all previous Governors.

Jamaica Weddings
The Jamaican women have two shortcomings. They are uneducated, and they are unattractive.
They refuse to marry unless they can produce finery for their wedding dress, a ring for their finger, and a wedding breakfast for their friends.

Cutting out red tape, Lady Huggins formed a federation of Jamaican women; arranged for a well-known firm of jewellers in London for the mass production of wedding rings at a price of 15s. 6d. apiece, and organised communal wedding breakfasts of six couples.

The women now marry, and husbands and wives swear by Lady Huggins. Colonial administration is simple when you have a man or woman on the spot to deal with it.

Industrial Ambassador

Early in May Sir Frederick Bain, the new President of the Federation of British Industries, leaves for Canada and the United States with the blessing of Mr.
Bevin and Sir Stafford Cripps.
Sir Frederick, who is also deputy chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries, is going to America at the invitation of the American and Canadian Ministers of Commerce, and is, I think, the first

A Mammoth
List

Good books are like good friends. The better we know them, the better we like them.
says a great lover of literature.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found what is probably the most comprehensive list of modern books and magazines ever published in any part of the world, covering two full pages of the "Sunday Herald."
It has been issued, together with the prices of all these thousands of publications, by the Pioneer Trading Company, of Kowloon Building, fourth floor, and is worthy of preservation for future reference.
In a comment, the Company
says:

The Company appreciate the interest of the public and are glad to furnish this complete price list. Little can happen in the field of magazine and living without knowing it promptly—and knowing too how it may benefit you. Besides the reading pleasure the magazine affords you, it may save you many dollars in the ideas, hints, short-cuts and guidance in everything that it will bring you.

Now is the proper time to accept this offer.

Magazines are read and enjoyed every month by millions of people throughout the world.
And the Hong Kong public too can learn just how beneficial and stimulating they can be for themselves. Just choose what your requirements are so as to be kept abreast of things, right from the start. The Pioneer Company's office is not only in contact with the publications in the United States of America but also with publishers throughout Great Britain and the whole world in the English tongue. Of course if they do not have items required, the Company will do their best to locate them wherever available, and immediately attend to the subscribers' needs.

This Company represents more than 30 publishers for books and magazines in the Colony of Hong Kong including Popular Photography, Popular Science, Popular Mechanics, Look, Radio News, National Geographic Magazine, Strong's
& Health, Flamingo, Textile World, Business Week, Better Homes & Gardens, American Collector, Weekly Saturday Evening Post, Mademoiselle,
Glamour and others.

MAKE-UP
AND THE OFFICE GIRL

By VICTOR MAMAK

A dab of powder, a dash of lipstick, a couple of strokes of the hair brush and the average working girl in Hong Kong is off to her work. She catches the ferry to Hong Kong from Kowloon. She dashes into her office—still ten minutes late with all the rush and hurry. She settles down in her chair and out comes the rouge, the lipstick, the compact, the comb, the little mirror and her office room takes on the semblance of a "petit" boudoir. She starts where she left off at her dressing-table. She notices the remnants of her last night's make-up. She returned home late last night. She was too tired to take her make-up off then and put on a fresh one. No shree, that would have made her half an hour late, she could get away with ten minutes but certainly not half an hour.

She tries to repair her make-up in the office. The bell rings, it's the boss. Leaving her make-up, paraphernalia on the table, and her face half made-up, she hurries to the boss's office with the pad and pencil. "Good morning."

It sounds more like "good night." The boss notices her dishevelled hair—presumes it must be the "new" hair-do from Holly-wood but somehow feels it is not so becoming. He also notices (or does he?) her half-made-up look—the rouge on one side is more than the other, the lips are painted but it seems she has just finished eating an apple in American style. Her eyes, oh yes, there is something about her eyes—well! skip it.

They Notice

When she leaves after she has finished taking down the letters, the boss notices some-thing else. Horror upon hor-ror! Her petticoat is showing—a good two inches below her dress. Presumably, he shrugs his shoulders. She is certainly different from the girl that came to see him the first time when she wanted the job. Yes sir, some of these bosses are pretty shrewd. They may seem dumb to their stenographers just because they do not wish to pass any personal remarks, but they do notice a lot of things.

When a girl seeks employ-ment, she takes all the trouble to make herself as attractive as possible for her interview with the executive of a firm. She realizes that a correct make-up, a dress that speaks of good taste and a becoming hair-do are important factors in a man's first impression of a girl who seeks employment with him. But what she does not seem to realize is that these factors are also instrumental to her future success and to help keep her job.

No matter how late a woman returns home from a party, she must not go to bed wearing her make-up. She should make a liberal use of a good cleansing cream. She may or may not wash her face with soap and water. Some women use only soap and water to take off their make-up. This is wrong. Soap and water will only clean the surface of the face—it's the pores that require thorough cleaning and a good cleansing cream only can perform this function. After wiping off the cleansing cream, a woman should apply a night cream, if her skin is dry, and leave it on. If her skin is oily, a thorough cleansing alone will do. No night cream is necessary.

A Few Minutes

In the morning, a girl should be able to spare a few minutes at least for her make-up. The day make-up should be simple and never elaborate. If she has properly applied her make-up in the morning at home, she will need but little repainting during the working hours. At no time should an office girl make her desk a dressing table.

Careless make-up reflects on a girl's habits. If she is careless about her own looks, she can hardly be expected to be careful about her office work. It is a woman's privilege to look her best at all times but apparently the average working girl in Hong Kong does not seem to share this view. Of course there are exceptions but, like other exceptions, they prove the rule—in this case un-happily so.

Mr. Chundrigar, who leaves London by air for Geneva tonight, temporarily to lead the Indian delegation to the International Trade Organisation Conference, has spent the past week in London interviewing prominent members of the Board of Trade, including its President, Sir Stafford Cripps, and the Permanent Secretary, Sir John Woods.

"I have taken the opportunity," Mr. Chundrigar said, "to impress on the Board of Trade of the necessity for speeding the delivery of goods to India. Delivery schedules have been too much delayed," he added, "even allowing for all difficulties with which British manufacturers are faced. Delivery of electrical generators, for example, is about one year behind schedule."

New York, May 16.
 Stocks generally broke to new lows for the year or longer with a late heavy selling wave putting the ticker tape as much as three minutes behind and dropping leaders one to seven or more points. Transfers were around 1,430,000.

A new five for one split by Eastman Kodak common opened on the closing end and closed 3 1/2 off at 47 which meant a fall of some 20 points on the old stock.

Other casualties included Glenn Martin, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Lockheed, Philip Morris, Santa Fe, Norfolk and Western, Texas Company and American Woolen.

Persistent pessimism over business consumer resistance, the outlook for profits amid rising wages and other costs, labour legislation and taxes put most professional on the liquidation side, and discouraged brokerage customers joined in trimming commitments.

Good earnings and dividends were mostly ignored.

President of the F.B.I. to be invited in this capacity.

Already a gas expert in the first world war, during which he lost an arm, he was summoned by Mr. Churchill in 1941 to attend a meeting of his most eminent scientists with a view to being "vetted" for chemical services in the recent war.

He faced his audience nervously. "I feel like the man from Galashale," he said, "who was showing a group of American experts round the famous tweed works. The visitors expressed great admiration for the fabric and asked to see the school of design. The man from Galashale said there was none, but the Americans insisted that there must be. If not, how could the works produce such the fine patterns. 'Och,' said the Borderer, modestly, 'we're no very well educated in Galashale, so ye see we just had to rely on the brains that the Almighty has given us.' The scientists reported favourably, and Sir Frederick was appointed Chairman of the Chemical Control Board.

Civilian Attaches
 The appointment of Air Marshal Douglas Collyer as the first Civil Air Attache to the British Embassy in Paris makes diplomatic history in more ways than one. An air officer of great experience, he was Air Attache in Paris before the recent war. It must be rare for a Service attache to return to the same post in a civil capacity.

Without in any way criticising the appointment, which is well justified and has certainly been given to a very able officer, it does, I think, emphasise a bureaucratic tendency which has hitherto escaped notice.

Government departments, having been requested to reduce their personnel by 10 per cent, have for some time been seeking to cut staff abroad where pay and allowances are attractive, and where the 'cut' will presumably not reach. Our embassies are now burdened with all kinds of new attaches: Labour Attaches, Press Attaches, Agricultural Attaches, Food Attaches, and in Washington, even a Colonial Attache. An attempt to create a Film Attache has perhaps been only temporarily defeated.

Inevitably these attaches make work and form staffs. I find it hard to believe that this flood of extraneous staffs can increase the efficiency of our embassies or lighten the burdens of the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Conference
 The conference has been a cinematograph which may involve us in the most unforeseen and perhaps most disagreeable surprises. Disorder became an inextricable tangle from the moment when the Big Four, assembled together, decided to tackle all questions without consulting anyone and without warning. The result is that, at a moment when the Germans are already preparing the text of the document to be submitted to them is not yet settled, and no decision has been taken on the important points.

This statement is not a comment on the Moscow move, with some very minor omissions it is taken from a letter written by Mr. Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador in London, on April 28, 1919. Peace with Germany was signed, and a treaty of alliance was signed with the United States. The League of Nations was created, and a new world order was established.
